SYNOPSIS

The shophouses and other heritage buildings are cultural icons that have a uniquely Singaporean identity. Official nostalgia and support of their national worth came about belatedly in the 1980s. The talk will evaluate and analyze the experiences obtained to-date in conserving Singapore's heritage buildings and their environment. In addition, the speaker will provide views and suggestions to further enhance their cultural values and their adaptive re-use in a more sustainable manner.

A panel consisting of members from various conservation-related associations (National Heritage Board, Urban Redevelopment Authority, Singapore Heritage Society, Singapore Institute of Architects, etc) will be invited to have a discourse of the points raised up by the speaker. The audience is also highly encouraged to partake in this debate.

PROFILE

Mr. Ong Teong Pin
FSIA, FSIP, MRTPI & Past President, SIP
Managing Director, APCO Architects & Town Planners Collaborative Pte Ltd

As an architect planner, Mr. Ong Teong Pin is tremendously experienced, having worked in both the public and private sectors. He is also an ardent advocate of conserving Singapore cultural identity. To this cause, he has written and spoken on the topic on several occasions and is involved in conservation of numerous traditional shophouses.

As part of the research in his interest, Mr. Ong has conducted surveys and studies of Singapore conservation practices within the existing downtown city area. The results of this study will be included in this talk on the practice of conservation locally.
