SYNOPSIS

Colour plays an important role in our view of the world and influences almost all aspects of our daily life. Whether it is naturally occurring, added to enhance aesthetic appeal or used to convey a meaning, colour significantly affects many of our choices and actions.

Imagine a world without colour:

- none of the natural beauty that we see in our landscapes, flora and fauna
- no coloured coatings to enhance the appearance of our homes and our vehicles
- no coloured fabrics for our clothes and furnishings which allow us to express our individuality
- no high visibility clothing to protect our workers
- no high visibility signs to guide the way

Colour is also one of the key choices in the design process for public and private buildings.

This seminar presented by LANXESS offers an overview of some of the important considerations when selecting coloured building materials and illustrates some of the ways in which colour is increasingly being used to transform concrete from a low cost material into an aesthetically pleasing and versatile design element.

As part of the global LANXESS Chemicals Group, LANXESS - Inorganic Pigments Division are a leading supplier of durable, cost effective pigments. These are pigments used to enhance the appearance of a very broad range of products including, coatings, landscaping products - such as paving blocks, paving flags, walling and asphalt and - cementitious products, such as, concrete roof tiles, pre-cast elements, mortars, grouts and ready-mix concrete.
