About the speaker

Born in 1941.Toyo Ito graduated from the University of Tokyo in 1965 and established his office in 1971.In the 70’s, he sought to erase conventional meaning from his works through minimalist tactics,then developed lightness in architecture that resembles air and wind.Since the completion of“Sendai Mediatheque”in 2001, he has been exploring architecture of the 21st century that goes beyond modernism’s purity and machine analogy,transcending architecture through autopoietic processes and organic geometries into life-forms that reflect nature.
Awards and Prizes;Golden Lion for Lifetime Achievement from the 8th International Architecture Exhibition “NEXT” at the Venice Biennale (2002), Royal Gold Medal from The Royal Institute of British Architects (2006), Frederick Kiesler Prize (2008), Premio Imperiale (2010), etc.

This Lecture is Co organised by JCC, Japan Foundation and NUS Dept of Architecture, Supported by SIA, Design S, Design Singapore.
