

SIA Professional Knowledge Series: UHI – Urban Heat Islands

Urban conurbation areas with a high density of buildings suffer particularly from global warming; in future, people living in these parts of the world will have to expect a considerable reduction in the quality of life.

Today already, the average temperature in large cities is between five and eleven degrees higher than in the surrounding countryside. Scientists refer to this phenomenon as the urban heat island effect or UHI effect for short.

The UHI effect is a typical feature of the climatic situation in urban conurbation areas and has several causes.
