

Mould fungi indoors – causes, assessment, sanitation with mineral products

Micro-organisms such as fungi and germs are a natural part of our natural environment and usually tolerated by humans without major reactions. However, if the concentration of mould fungi reaches a certain amount severe health problems may arise for humans. In the meantime it seems to be proven that higher levels of fungi indoors can cause a series of severe illnesses. Respiratory diseases, asthma, allergies, susceptibility to infections, but also fatigue, headaches, skin and eye irritations are only a few of the health disorders that can be caused by mould fungi. These illnesses develop through the spores in the air that are being inhaled.
