

SIA Inspirational Talk by Minister Lim Swee Say: Sustaining growth the “manpower-lean” way

Mr Lim Swee Say
Minister for Manpower

Mr Lim Swee Say studied Electronics, Computer and Systems Engineering at Loughborough University of Technology in the United Kingdom. He also has a Master's Degree in Management from the Stanford Sloan Programme at Stanford University.

In the earlier part of his career before entering politics, Mr Lim held senior leadership positions in National Computer Board and the Economic Development Board.

He entered politics in 1996 and served in various capacities with the Labour Movement, Ministry of Trade and Industry, Ministry of Communications and Information Technology, Ministry of The Environment, and Ministry of National Development. He stepped down as the Secretary General of NTUC and took office as the Minister for Manpower in May 2015.

Synopsis

The Singapore Economy is in transition to become more innovative and productive. Our workforce is going through structural change as well, better educated but ageing. To sustain growth, we will have to transform the economy to remain competitive and upgrade the workforce to remain employable. We also need to minimise job-skill mismatch to meet the manpower needs of businesses, and the career aspirations of our people.

To overcome these growing challenges, we will need to strengthen tripartite partnership not only at the national level, but also at the sectoral level covering all major sectors of the economy and society.
